BRITAIN'S LAST WORD TO ITALY:

We have been able to embark and save more than four-fifths of the British Expeditionary Force, which the Germans claim to have annihilated, said Mr. Anthony Eden, our War Minister, last night. There is a crowded British port at which some of them arrived. Every ship is packed with men, and French troops from Flanders are on pages 1 and 2.

Vessels of all kinds have come alongside. Many pictures of the homecoming of British and French troops from Flanders are on pages 1 and 2.
