KZ Treblinka, Lageplan (Zeichnung)

The putrid odor of decaying human remains could be smelled up to 10 kilometres (6.2 miles) away at the nearby village of Treblinka. It was evident that large-scale killings were happening nearby, which caused panic among the villagers. On incoming Holocaust trains to Treblinka, many of the soon-to-be-murdered Jews locked inside correctly guessed what would happen to them based on the stench

Almost a million people were executed over the course of 15 months. The camp was dismantled at the end of the war and a farmhouse built on it in an attempt to hide the evidence of genocide
