YPRES

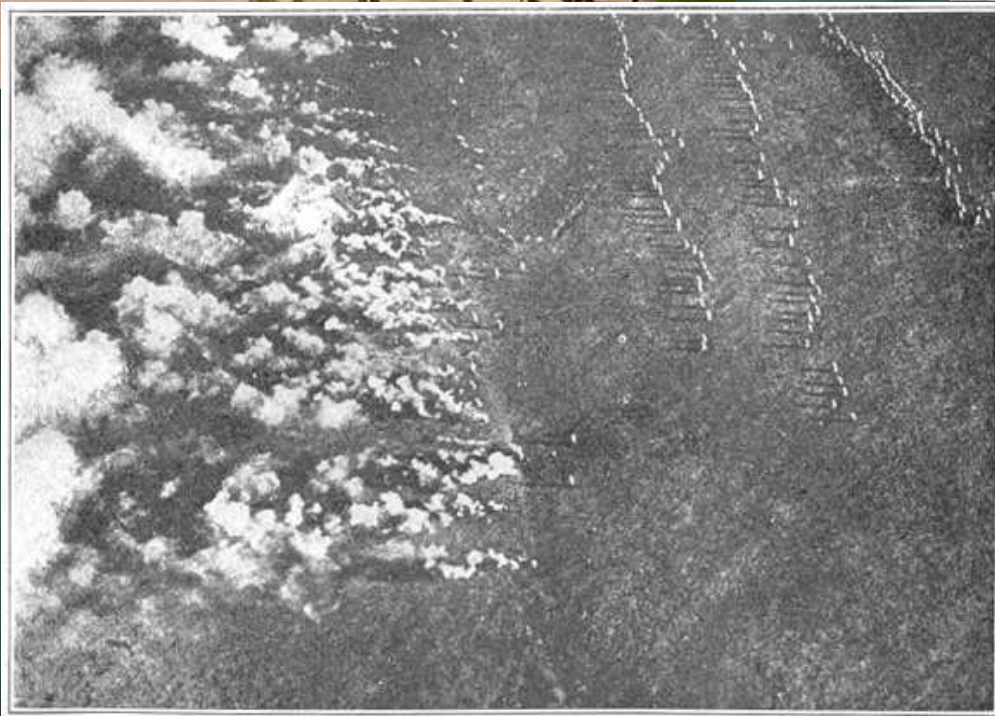

Second Battle of Ypres

April 22, 1915

- Canadians were moved into position in early April 1915
- On the 22nd of April Germans released 160 tons of chlorine gas
- A four mile hole was developed in the Allied line due to the gas attack
- Canada fought through the night to close the gap
- On April 24th, German forces launched another gas attack in an attempt to push the Canadians back

Second Battle of Ypres

- The Canadian forces held the line until reinforcements could arrive
- The cost of this 48 hour battle was extremely high; over 4000 Canadians injured and 2000 deaths.
- Canadian forces established a reputation as a formidable fighting force in their first major appearance on a European battlefield.

Artillery: The Big Bertha

They were enormous canons that could launch shells that weighed a ton 15 kilometers. Their destructive power could penetrate two meters of earth, three meters of concrete in a meter thick wall.

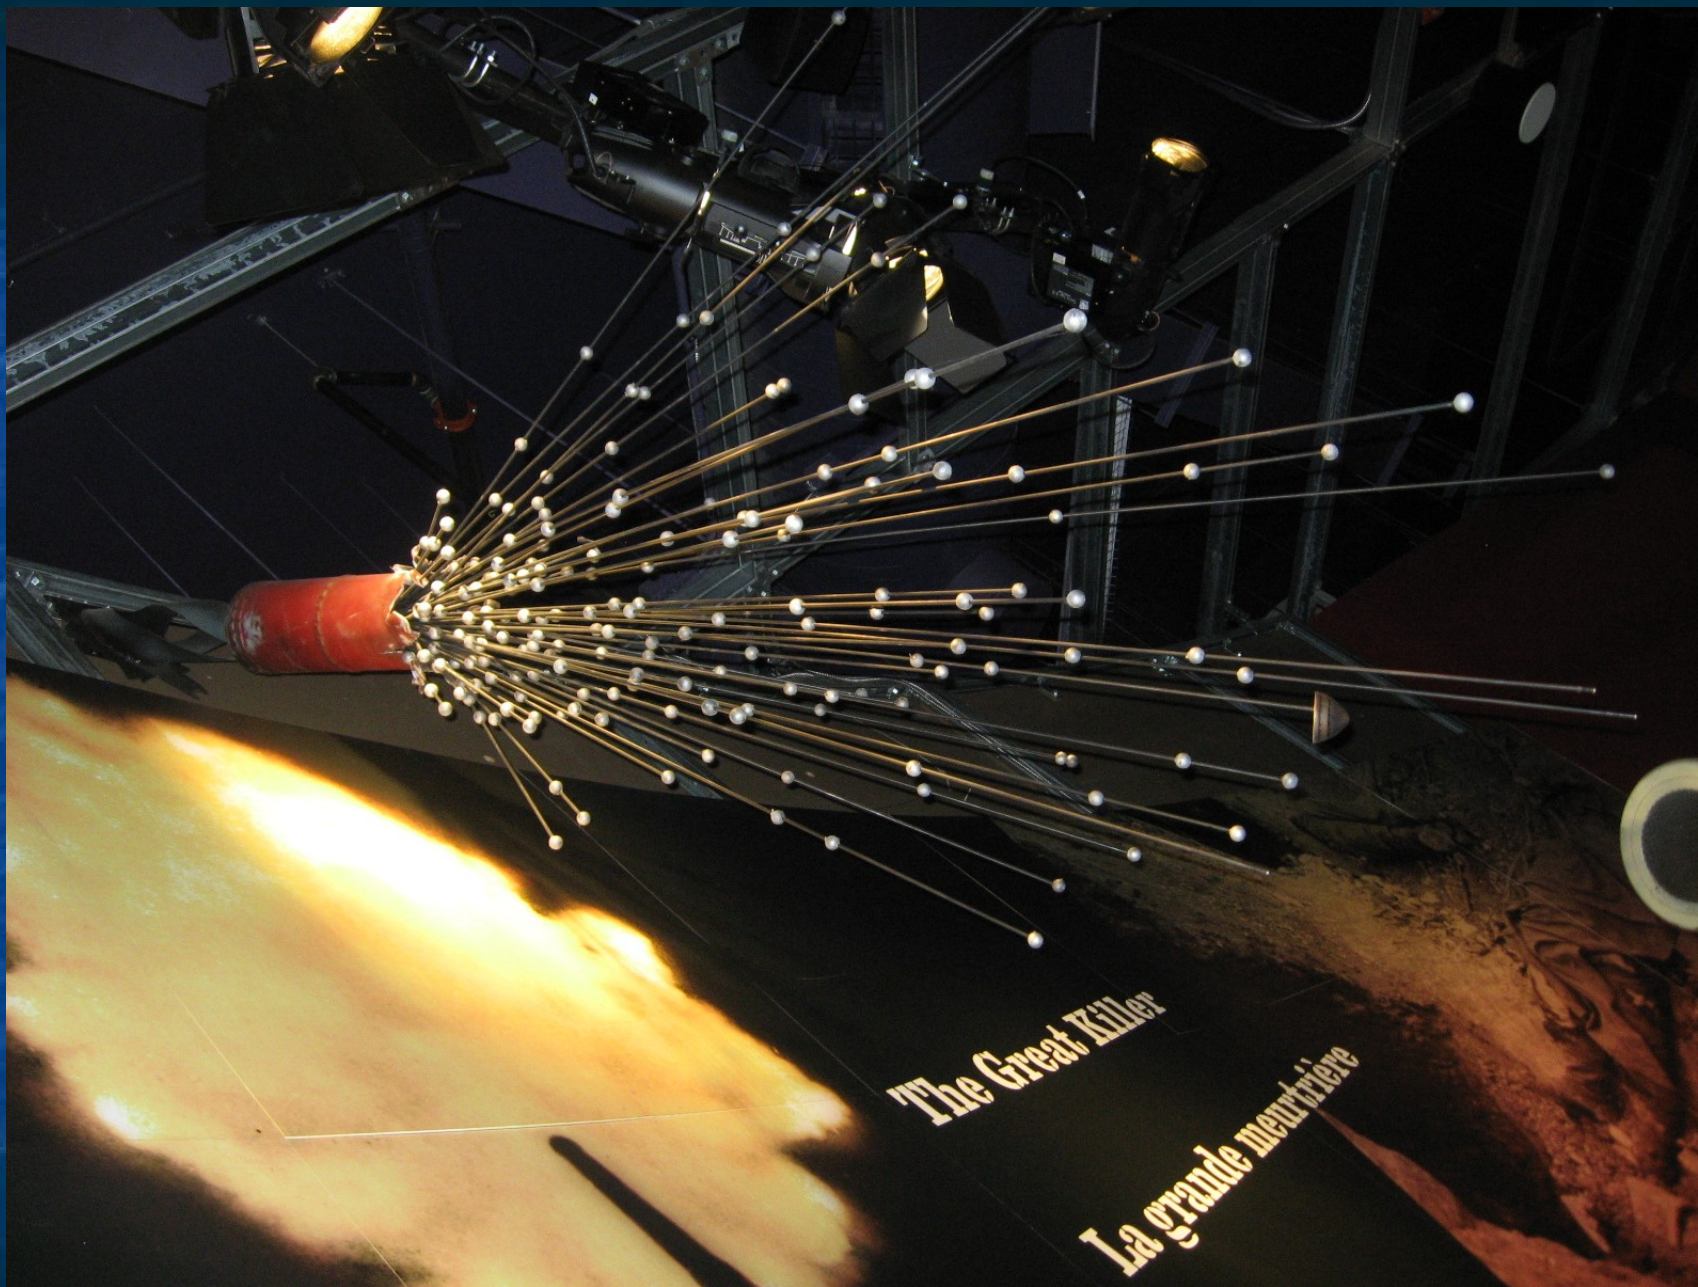

A Storm of Steel

Shrapnel shells are timed to burst in the air, producing a deadly, cone-shaped rain of whirling metal.

Soldiers suffered horrific wounds from shrapnel. Although all weaponry caused terrible physical damage, cone-shaped bullets produced cleaner wounds than irregular-shaped shrapnel. Shrapnel pieces ricocheted inside the body, causing further internal damage and gaping exit wounds. A soldier wounded in the chest from shrapnel was three times more likely to die than from a bullet.

Other Trench Things...

Verdun

- Verdun was a well fortified town surrounded by fortresses and trenches
- It projected out into German occupied territory
- It remains the longest battle in history, spanning roughly 10 months, beginning on February 21st 1916 and ending on December 11th 1916.
- The French suffered 550,000 losses and the Germans fared better at only 434,000

Battle of Verdun

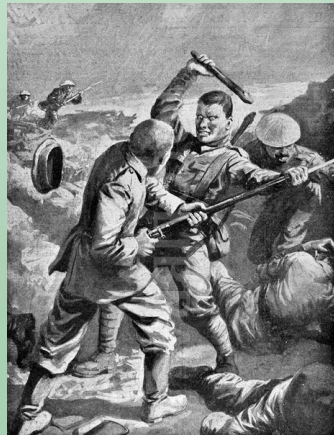

Feb 21, 1916

Opening Barrage:

1200 guns targeted 60 forts and strong points. Over 80 000 shells hit per day. A huge gaping hole was torn in the French defenses.

French Defenders:

French defenders caught in the open were blown apart. 98 % of units were lost and men went insane from the exploding shells

Bravery – Hand to Hand Combat:

More than 80 % of casualties were taken in hand to hand combat.

Flame Throwers:

Both sides used flame throwers to gain territory.

SOMME

Somme Offensive

June 24, 1916

Opening Barrage:

1500 guns bombed German defenses for 5 days.

German Withdrawal:

The German troops withdrew from the frontline trenches into the back trenches, knowing they could rearm their guns in 3 minutes.

British Advance – Machine Guns:

The British felt that no one would survive the barrage, and they sent a 12 mile column of four rows of men (only 2 meters apart) towards the well armed German machine guns.

20 000 died on the first day.

Battle of the Somme

- Began on July 1st, 1916 – 60K casualties on the British side
- A counter offensive against the German push at Verdun
- 1.5 million rounds of artillery ammunition
- 600 000 British and French troops were lost in less than 3 months
- Canadians joined the battle on September, 15th 1916
- Newfoundland Regiment joined battle on the first day:
 - Of the 780 men who went forward only about 110 survived unscathed, of whom only 68 were available for roll call the following day.... a casualty rate of approximately 90 percent.
- The Canadians were able to capture many key positions
- After 141 days the battle fighting came to a stand still
- Canada had 24 000 casualties
- Approximately 1 million injured and 300K killed

TANKS!

The first tank was named "Little Willie" and could travel 3 miles per hour, (2 on rough terrain). This tank was restricted as it could not cross trenches. Early on, tanks often broke down and became ditched - i.e. stuck in a muddy trench - more often than anticipated.

Tanks were deployed during the notorious, almost swampy, conditions of the Third Battle of Ypres (more commonly known as 'Passchendaele'). They promptly sank in the mire and were entirely without benefit.

By 1917 however, the tanks had improved so that they helped solve the problem of trench warfare, and were increasingly used during the Allied advance of summer 1918.

Vimy Ridge: April 9, 1917

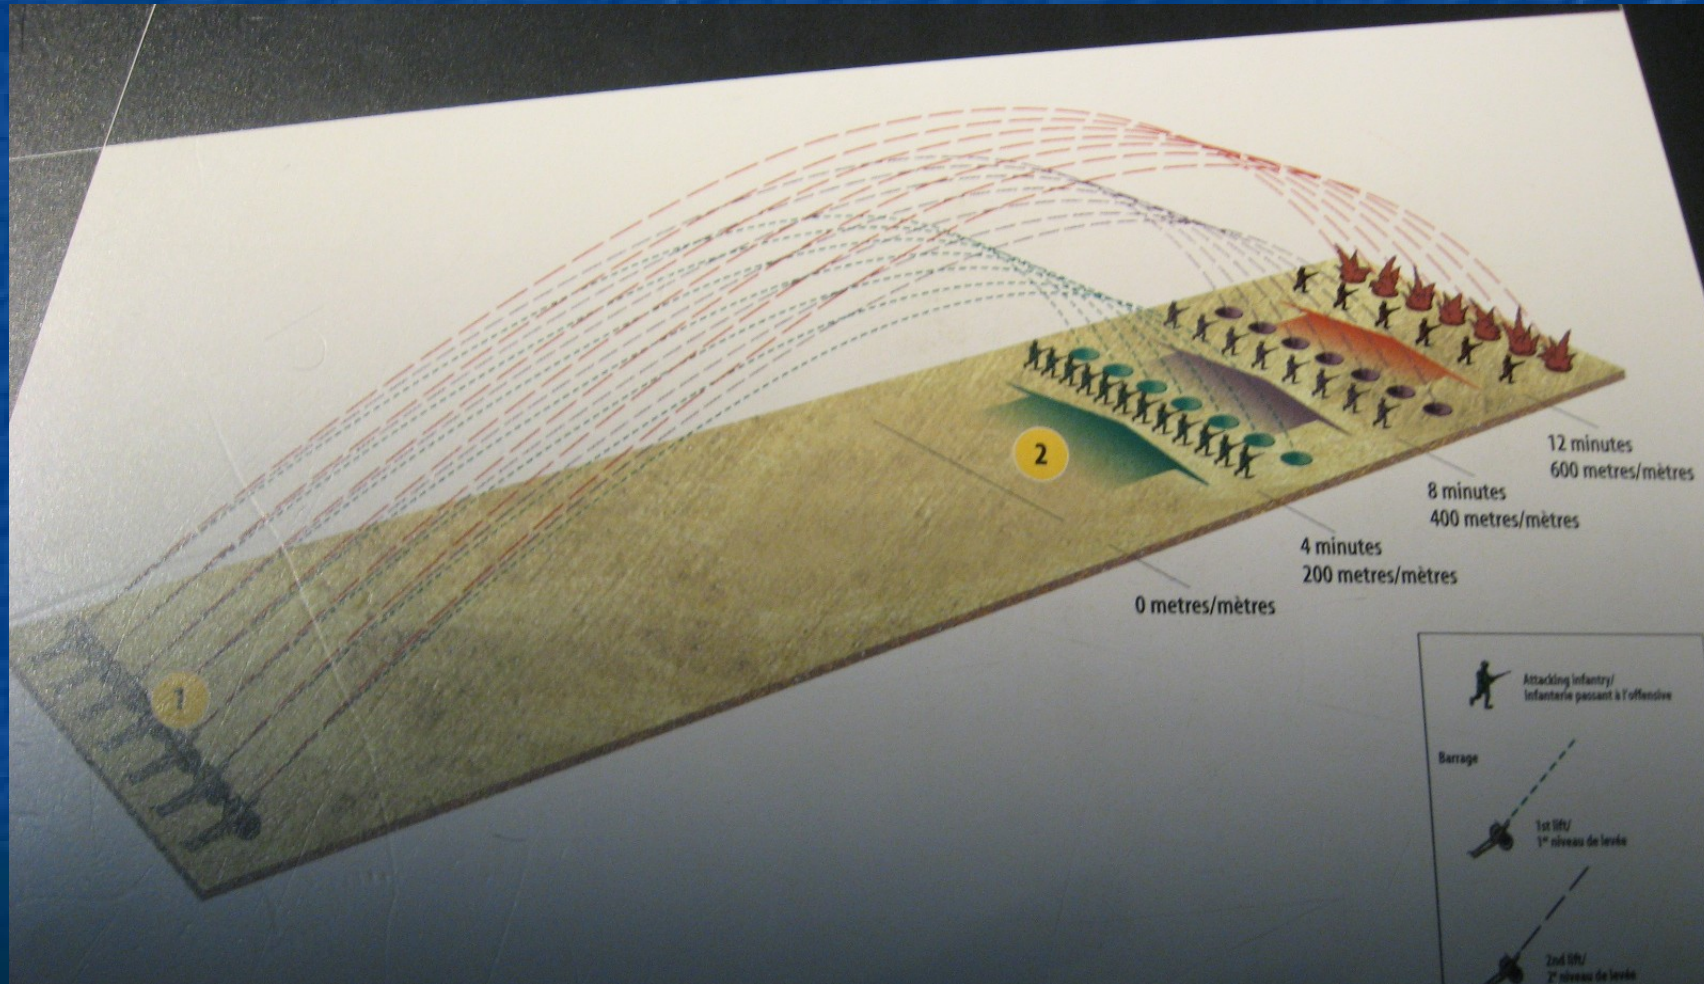

Vimy Ridge

- Vimy was a key position in the German line
- French and English forces attempted numerous times to break through the German line here but failed repeatedly at a tremendous cost
- On April 9th, 1917 the task of taking the ridge was given to the Canadians
- It took only five days for the Canadian forces to sweep the Germans off the ridge
- Over 7 000 Canadians were injured and 3598 were killed
- After this battle Canadian troops were seen as an elite fighting force
- Many historians insist that Canada became a country at Vimy

Other Canadian Contributions

Boy Soldier

At 17, Sergeant Thomas Ricketts, VC was the youngest Newfoundlander or Canadian ever to be awarded the Victoria Cross.

Thomas Ricketts won the Victoria Cross while serving with the Royal Newfoundland Regiment near Ledeghem, Belgium in October 1918. With most of his Lewis gun crew wounded, Ricketts volunteered to run across 100 metres of bullet-swept field to gather more ammunition. Returning across the same killing ground, Ricketts captured several German artillery pieces, machine guns, and prisoners.

PASSCHENDAELE

Passchendaele, 1917

(also known as the third battle of Ypres)

The casualties of Passchendaele were horrendous. The Germans lost 270,000 men. The Allied forces lost 450,000. This included 36,500 Australians and 16,000 Canadians.

The Canadians were lost in the final assault between October 26 and November 10. 90,000 of the fallen bodies were never identified. 42,000 were never found.

Letters from the Front

...Lice and anxiety came into my life about the same time. At stand-to one morning a flight of whizz-bangs skimmed the top of the trench. The man next to me went down with a scream and half his face gone. The sand-bag in front of me was ripped open and I was blinded and half-choked with its contents.

...At the end of the short trench I stumbled over something. A bank of cloud cleared for a moment from the moon, and I saw it was a headless body.

...I went back to my post, frightened beyond anything that should be humanly possible. Twice I was blown off my feet by the concussion of bursting shells. The whine of falling shrapnel filled the air. I seemed to be all alone in a world tottering into ruin. If only the noise would stop I felt I might keep my reason. I think I prayed for a direct hit to end it all. By a miracle, however, I was not even touched.

...One got used to many things, but I never overcame my horror of the rats. They abounded in some parts, great loathsome beasts gorged with flesh. I shall never forget.

...I had one from a woman friend who had always seemed intelligent and understanding. Yet she asked this singular question: Is it as bad as they say it is out there, or is it only the shortage of cigarettes that makes it seem so rotten?" The irony of it coming at that time made me giggle like a schoolgirl. The others wanted to know the joke so I read it aloud. The comments were unprintable.

Total War

- Diverting all resources and attention to the war effort
- Food rations for civilians
- Use of propaganda

Do Your Bit!

In a popular wartime phrase, everyone on the home front was encouraged to “do your bit” to support the soldiers and the war effort.

Almost every city and town across the country launched campaigns to raise money for the war. In an equally important effort, women engaged in unpaid community patriotic work that resulted in countless necessary supplies and gifts, including warm clothing, bandages, and food.

THE BLOOD VOTE

"Why is your face so white, Mother?

Why do you choke for breath?"

"O I have dreamt in the night, my son,

That I doomed a man to death."

"Why do you hide your hand, Mother?

And crouch above it in dread?"

"It beareth a dreadful brand, my son:

With the dead man's blood 'tis red.

"I hear his widow cry in the night,

I hear his children weep,

And always within my sight.

O God!

The dead man's blood

doth leap.

"They put the dagger into my grasp.

It seemed but a pencil then.

I did not know it was a fiend a-gasp

For the priceless blood of men.

"They gave me the ballot paper,

The grim death warrant of doom.

And I smugly sentenced the man to death

In that dreadful little room.

"I put it inside the Box of Blood

Nor thought of the man I'd slain,

Till at midnight came like a whelming flood

God's word - and the Brand of Cain

"O little son! O my little son!

Pray God for your Mother's soul.

That the scarlet stain may be white again

In God's great Judgment Roll"
