

- Julius Caesar was murdered in 44 B.C.E.
- His nephew, Augustus, took the throne
- The senate decided to name a month after him

- They also decided that Julius was no better than Augustus so they gave his month 31 days as well by taking one off of February
 - They then renumbered all of the month-day numbering so there were not three months in a row with 31 days
 - Thus messing up the consistent ordering of Caesar's 30-31 pattern
