

- The plans on the biggest military operation in WWII and history began on December 18, 1940, codenamed Operation Barbarossa.
- Hitler expected a victory within a couple of months and the Soviet Union's defence was not expected.
- They planned to take the eastern portion first with the Ukraine, Ostland, Kauasus, and other divisions. Eventually to take control of Leningrad, a symbolic capture.

- Hitler believed that once he captured the Soviet Union, he would have such a control that the allies would fall (Britain).
- Hitler and Germany did not prepare as well as they thought for Operation Barbarossa.
- Hitler was too overconfident based upon recent success in Western Russia and he did not anticipate the operation to carry on into the winter as it did.
