- Hitler believed that once he captured the Soviet Union, he would have such a control that the allies would fall (Britain).
- Hitler and Germany did not prepare as well as they thought for Operation Barbarossa.
- Hitler was too overconfident based upon recent success in Western Russia and he did not anticipate the operation to carry on into the winter as it did.

- 3300 tanks crossed into Soviet Border
- 3 – 4 Million men were assembled and sent into the USSR under German command
- Material was stockpiled within the East Soviet Border
- German troops were slightly outnumbered by Soviet troops on the frontier, as well as a number of the USSR's allies.
